PROUDLY PRESENTS THEIR YEARBOOK

"To the eyes of God there are no numbers: seeing all things at one time,
He counts nothing."

After long years,
How should I greet thee?
With silence and tears.

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

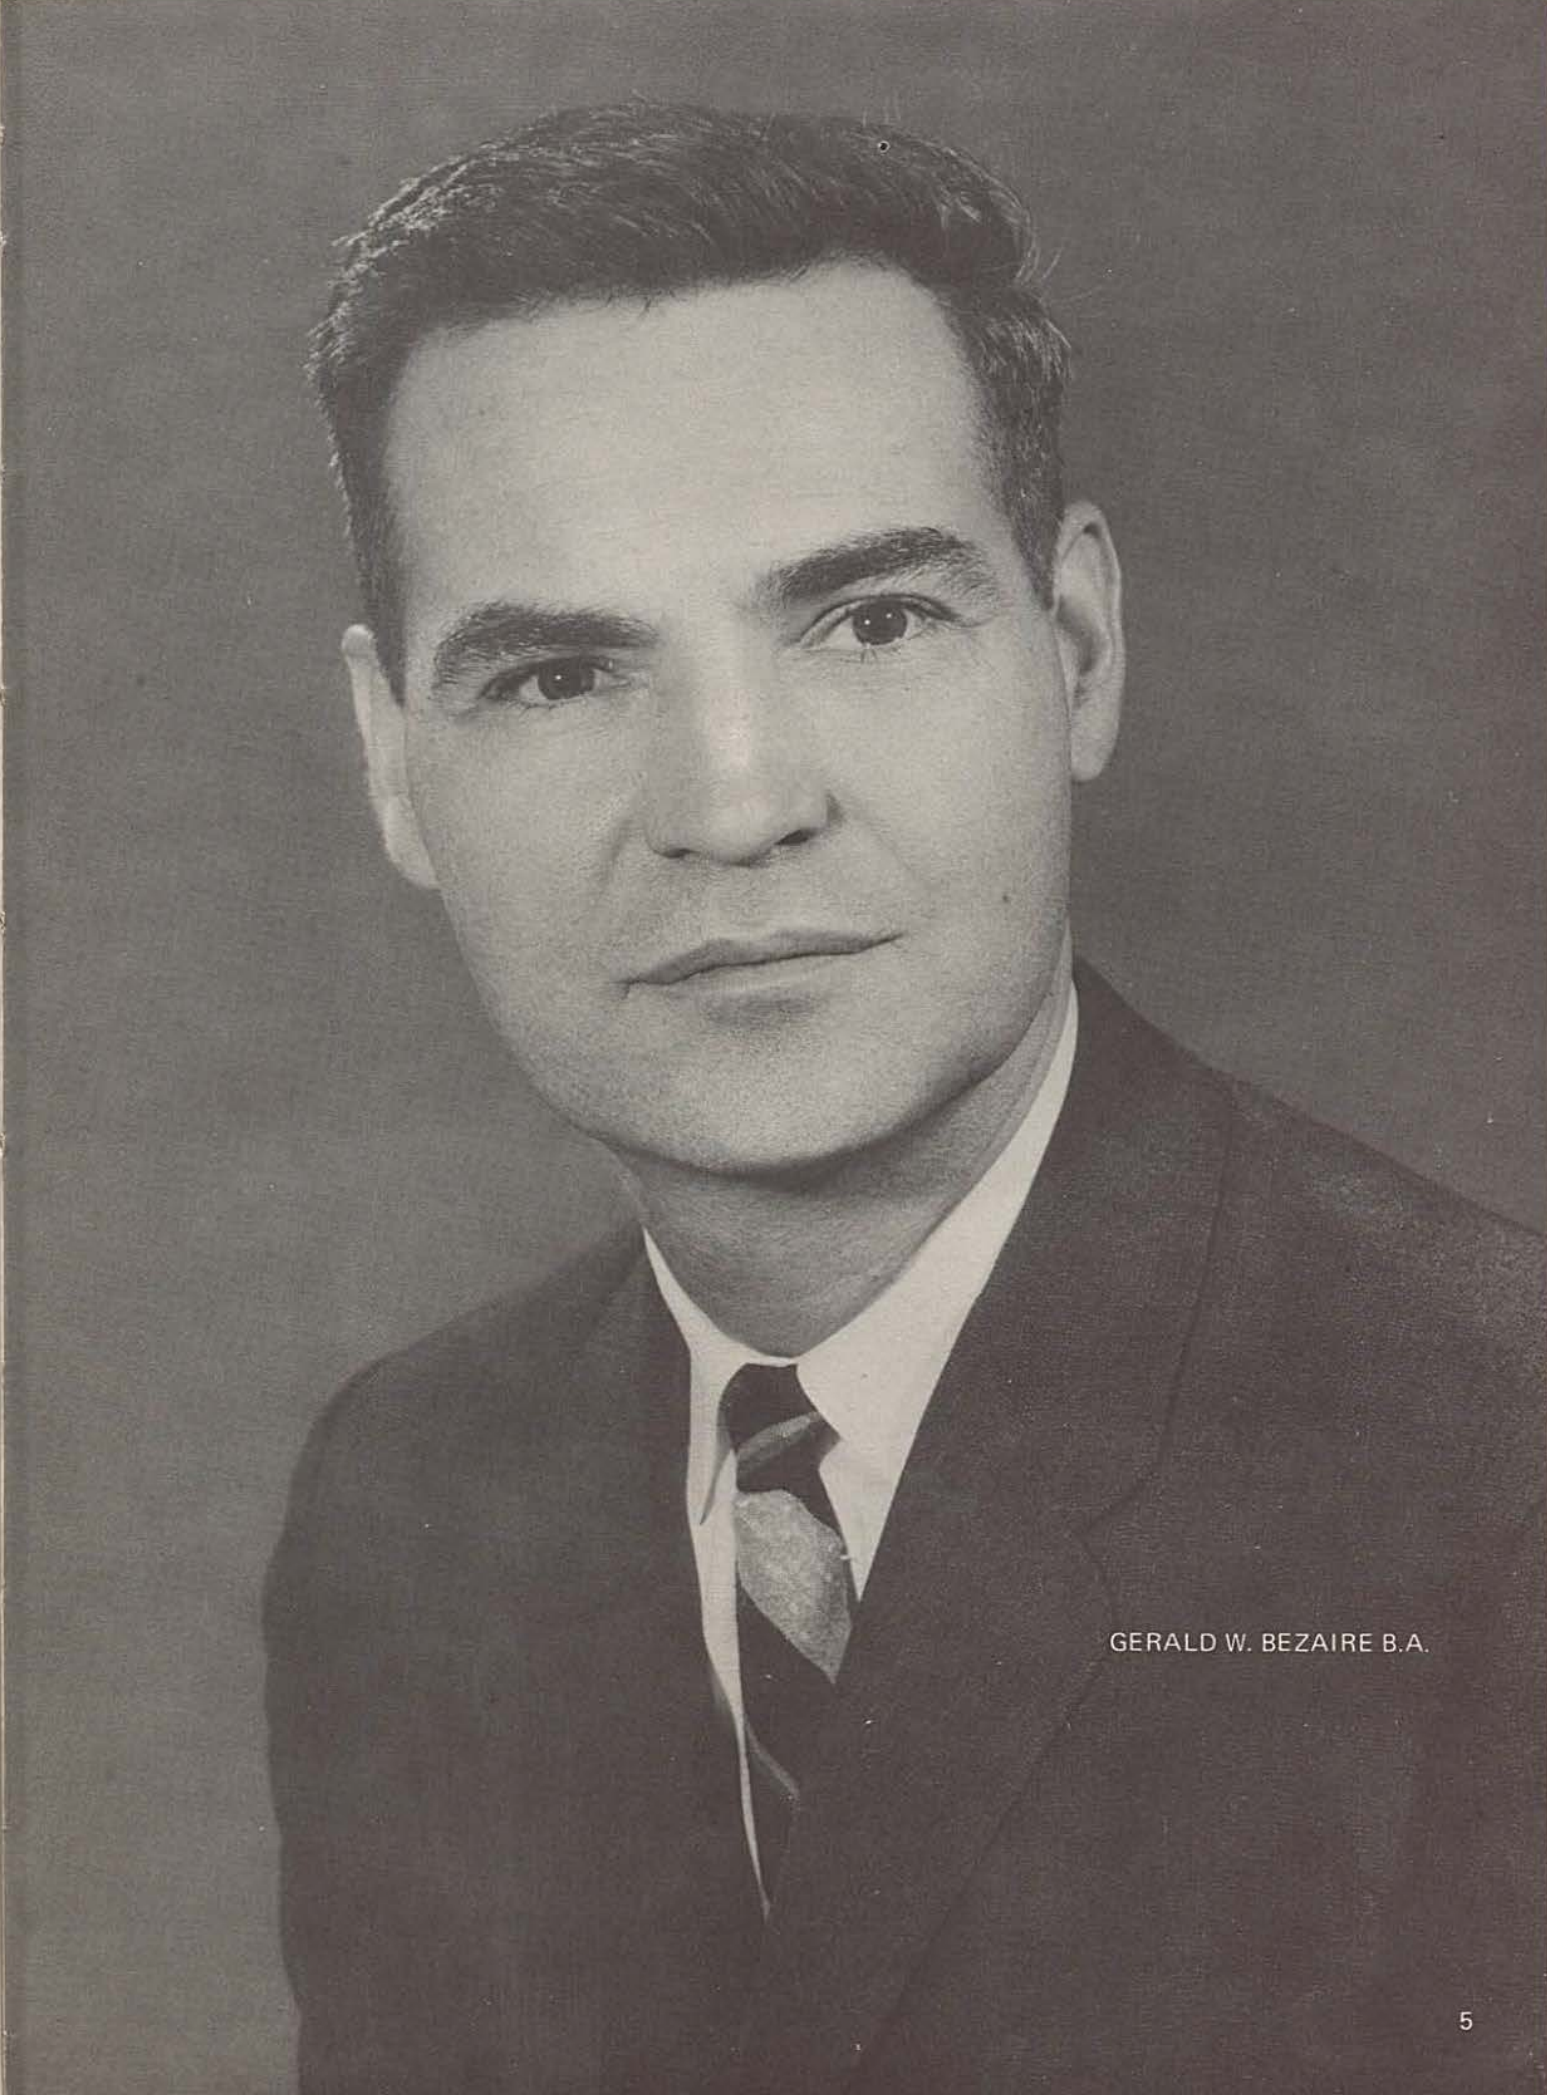
The most difficult aspect of life for our young people today is the necessity of gearing their personalities to the constant changes demanded by the never-ending advances in today's technological environment, while developing within themselves and for themselves a set of underlying principles which will permeate all levels of consciousness and give meaning and direction to their lives. These principles by their nature must be relatively stable; they must be assimilated from early social, moral, and religious environments; and they must be capable of perpetuating these environments. Young people must actively strive to adjust to superficial changes, but they must just as actively resist the attacks on principles occasioned by these superficial changes.

Stated in more specific terms we cannot gear our conduct to the times. Criminality is on the upswing in every locale in every country in the world, but we cannot assume criminal attitudes simply because so many people are involved in crime. Why? Because in spite of how we as individuals may feel about crime, the collective conscience of our civilization, the law, steps in and calls a halt to this type of activity. However, in the case of moral and religious principles the collective conscience is not so rigid, externalized or constant. These principles exist primarily within the individual and must be perpetuated by the individual. The law is difficult to change because of its collective formation; moral and religious principles can very readily be reasoned away on the conscious level by an individual because only that individual is involved in their formation.

Most people today would agree that assimilation of basic principles or character formation is a continuing process – highly accelerated during the early years, slowing considerably later in life – but a continuing process nonetheless.

Since character formation is a continuing process and underlying principles are subject to change we can see where danger both immediate and long range creeps in. Immediate, because any attitude which is assumed by an individual through rationalization will enable him to overcome inhibitions and accept any new morality – but on the emotional level, or below the level of consciousness, this acceptance leads to a tremendous build-up of anxiety which will manifest itself in any number of discomfiting ways, either physical or psychological, conscious or unconscious. The long range dangers are more insidious and involve future generations. The long range effects result from the fact that most people will tolerate the physical or psychological manifestations of their anxiety and then teach their youngsters by word or action their rationalized morality. The youngster now has the new morality and no inhibition and no anxiety. We have thus completed one revolution in a vicious spiral downwards which can only lead to the breakdown of family life, religious beliefs, moral codes, and virtually every good aspect of life as we know it.

How do we as individuals break this cycle? Simple, stop rationalizing. We know that an immoral approach to life brings certain immediate pleasures, but ultimate decadence. We know that the moral approach will bring us immediate deprivation, but ultimate happiness. And finally we know that we as intelligent individuals must take a stand based on these facts, not on what other people are saying or doing.



GERALD W. BEZAIRE B.A.

VICE-PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

Between the idea
And the reality,
Between the emotion
And the act
Falls the Shadow.

..... Hollow Men by T. S. Elliott

Who are the "Hollow Men"? — the students who decry the "status quo"? — or those who jealously protect this same "status quo"?

Every day we hear of student unrest. Causes are championed. Complaints, demonstrations, pickets, riots . . . we read of these around the world! Societies are in turmoil as young people question, even overturn, ancient and sometimes corrupt standards. Radicals who can no longer stand things as they are hope for better in changes. (Let me briefly interject that I am not against trying out new ideas, or of the following of causes. If I were, I should never have chosen the field of education as my vocation.)

Only too often, however, the idea to which the person devotes his energies has no basis in reality. Between the idea and the reality is a void which keeps the idea and its implementation separated — let us not follow hollow or empty causes!

How our emotions sometimes drive us to an act! We are often duped into acts in which all reason would never allow us to participate. As our shadow is an extension of ourselves, so our acts are an extension of our emotions. In the absence of cold reason, our emotions replace the ideals we profess and we become the pawns of those who would use us.

As graduates, you will be going on to further education or into the work world. When you are confronted with ideas, weigh them carefully. Ask yourself if they deserve your youthful energy. Do so calmly without allowing the crowd to influence your decision. In short, be an "individualist".

If old standards are to be "pulled down" consider carefully with what you will replace them. Progress, Yes! Destruction for self-centered reasons, No! Let changes be for the benefit of the majority, not the loud militant minority.

Who are the "Hollow Men"? They are those who wish changes because of benefit to self. They are those who rigidly hold on to the old, because they are afraid the new will cease to bring them the benefits to which they have become accustomed.

What is known I strip away,
I launch all men and women forward with me into the Unknown.
The clock indicates the moment — but what does eternity indicate? . . .

Song of Myself
by Walt Whitman

ERIC S. BRYAN B.A.

GUIDANCE

All of us want to be a success! We want the satisfaction of knowing that we have used all our abilities to do something worthwhile — that we are appreciated by others for our efforts and that we are making the world better for others by our presence.

Some of us think that by going to school we will learn how to be successful; but then we stop, assuming that because we have gone to school, "have learned how", we will automatically become a success. This is not true. We start in school but we never really finish. What we begin in school should be continued after we leave. Subjects taught in school are but tools to use in developing the qualities of success. These qualities are actually factors which can be cultivated by everyone, in school and out, if a student puts his mind to it.

What are the qualities of success which school can help us to develop and use? First there is the willingness to learn. School gives you the chance to learn and he who passes up the opportunity is foolish. Learning does not stop after school. One can learn something from every experience, every situation whether good or bad, if he is willing. The saddest person in the world is the one who feels that since certain fields of experiences don't "appeal" to him, there is nothing of value to be received. Often the most valuable, lasting lessons are learned in situations which are boring at the time.

Secondly, there is the ability to get along with others. This is perhaps the most valuable thing you can ever learn and the thing that will reward you the most. Most of the failures and unhappiness in the world today come because people haven't learned how to get along with their fellow men. We need to learn to be honest, develop integrity and cultivate an understanding of others.

The third is the art of thriftiness; not in the terms of money, but in terms of time — the use of abilities God has given us. Thriftiness means putting to good use each minute of every hour of the day.

It is my hope that all of you will find success in your endeavours . . . . that is my wish to you, the graduates of 1968-69.

"Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

Matthew 7:14

In the past five years we have seen so much that words could never express. Remembering back to our first days in high school, I think you can still recall the confusion and bewilderment evident in the eyes of your fellow classmates. To colloquialize; we were "grade-niners". Then with fear in our hearts we would actually dare to look back at the superior gazes of our upper-classmen. Even that was a challenge at the time.

Then there came a stage after that when we thought we were real "big-shots", but this phase, too, we outgrew in due course. How quickly the time passed and you can hardly believe, now, the great changes that have taken place inside each and every one of us.

I think we can honestly say that the great search for that (narrow way) has long been in the process but not until now have we been aware of it. And although it has only just begun, it is a good beginning, and as we enter an entirely new world next year, we can readily strive to enrich our lives if only we take the time. Fellow Classmates, heed this warning.

To those of you who remain at Belle River High, we say, exhaust all your energies toward seeking out the reality of your existence and cherish every experience you have, for each may be a bond that brings you closer to the truth.

GRADS

VOICE OF THE 1968-1969 GRADUATES

We the Graduates wish to voice a sincere belief which is shared by each individual represented here. Through the course of the years we have had countless opportunity to express and share our individual opinions. We have found that at the close of each day we have become a little more a part of each other. As Graduates we have shared many joyous times together and each of us has marvelled at the unity of spirit that we have claimed. As individuals we have all learned the major purpose for our being together. We have discovered, among ourselves, that we have been brought together to learn from each other and together we have found that it is not the materialistic display of 'marks' that assesses our newly acquired knowledge; the bulk of it lasting for only a temporary period. But it is our ambitious attitude by which we accept the wisdom that teachers, books and pure experience offer us.

Solomon was considered to be one of the wisest men that ever lived. God promised to grant him anything that he desired and Solomon chose wisdom. After many years he penned these words, "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom and getteth understanding. They are more precious than rubies: and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto them. Their ways are ways of pleasantness and all their paths are peace".

There is certainly a Solomon-like attitude in our midst which we are sure will still be flourishing within each of us after many years of separation.

C'est cute eh?

Where's the fire?
Where's the fire!

Hi, everybody in T.V. land.

I like citrus fruit.

That feels good,
do it again.

Want to join my gang?

Look that up in your Funk & Wagnall.

I hate my new Easter suit.

I finally graduated from sandbox.

Beware hot rocks.

I don't like you, you're old!

I'm going to be a hustler when I grow up.

Alright you guys!

My parents lost their heads, over me!

Yul Brynner never had it so good.

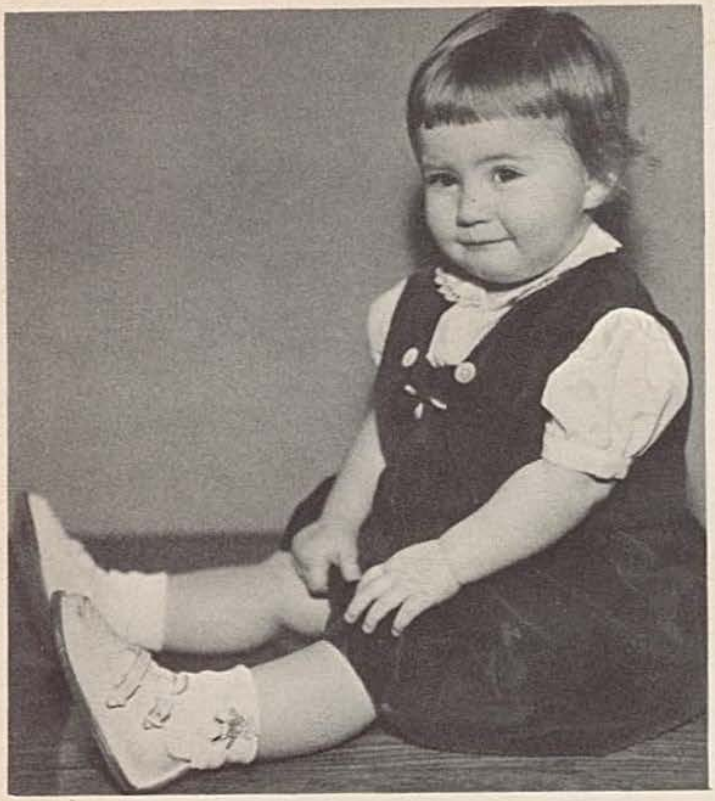
My Mom told me not to talk to strangers.

Light my fire!

I'd like you to meet my brother Ralph.

Give me one good reason why I can't play ten pin.

Mommy gave me a cow for Christmas.



My girdle is killing me!

I'm a pick-up.

Do I really look like a Fig?

I want to be a bunny when I'm big.

Why tinkle in bed with all this water in the lake to do it in.

Ride the wild surf.

Are we going to Florida, this Xmas?

Want to buy a used Easter egg?

Don't flush yet!

1,2,3 1,2,3...

I invented the low-cut playsuit.

I really need a new swim suit.

Who me? It can't be.

Why don't you come over and see me sometime?

Ah Ben, quit nagging!

Got a big bowl?

Ma, that dirty old man scared me.

That's what happens when you toot in your snowsuit!

Want a peanut Mr. Elephant?

Guess who swallowed the budgie!

Keep your distance, I'm shy.

My suspenders broke.

I'm sitting on a tack.

Gee Auntie I haven't seen you in a coon's age.

It seems to me that our age is most clearly defined in terms of rising expectations.

It invites our intelligent participation and certainly the more functional employment of our talents and energies.

One of my most gratifying experiences in recent months has been to witness the enthusiasm of Canadian youth and to learn of your involvement in all fields of endeavour.

May I encourage your efforts and wish all of you at Belle River District High School much success in the challenging years ahead.

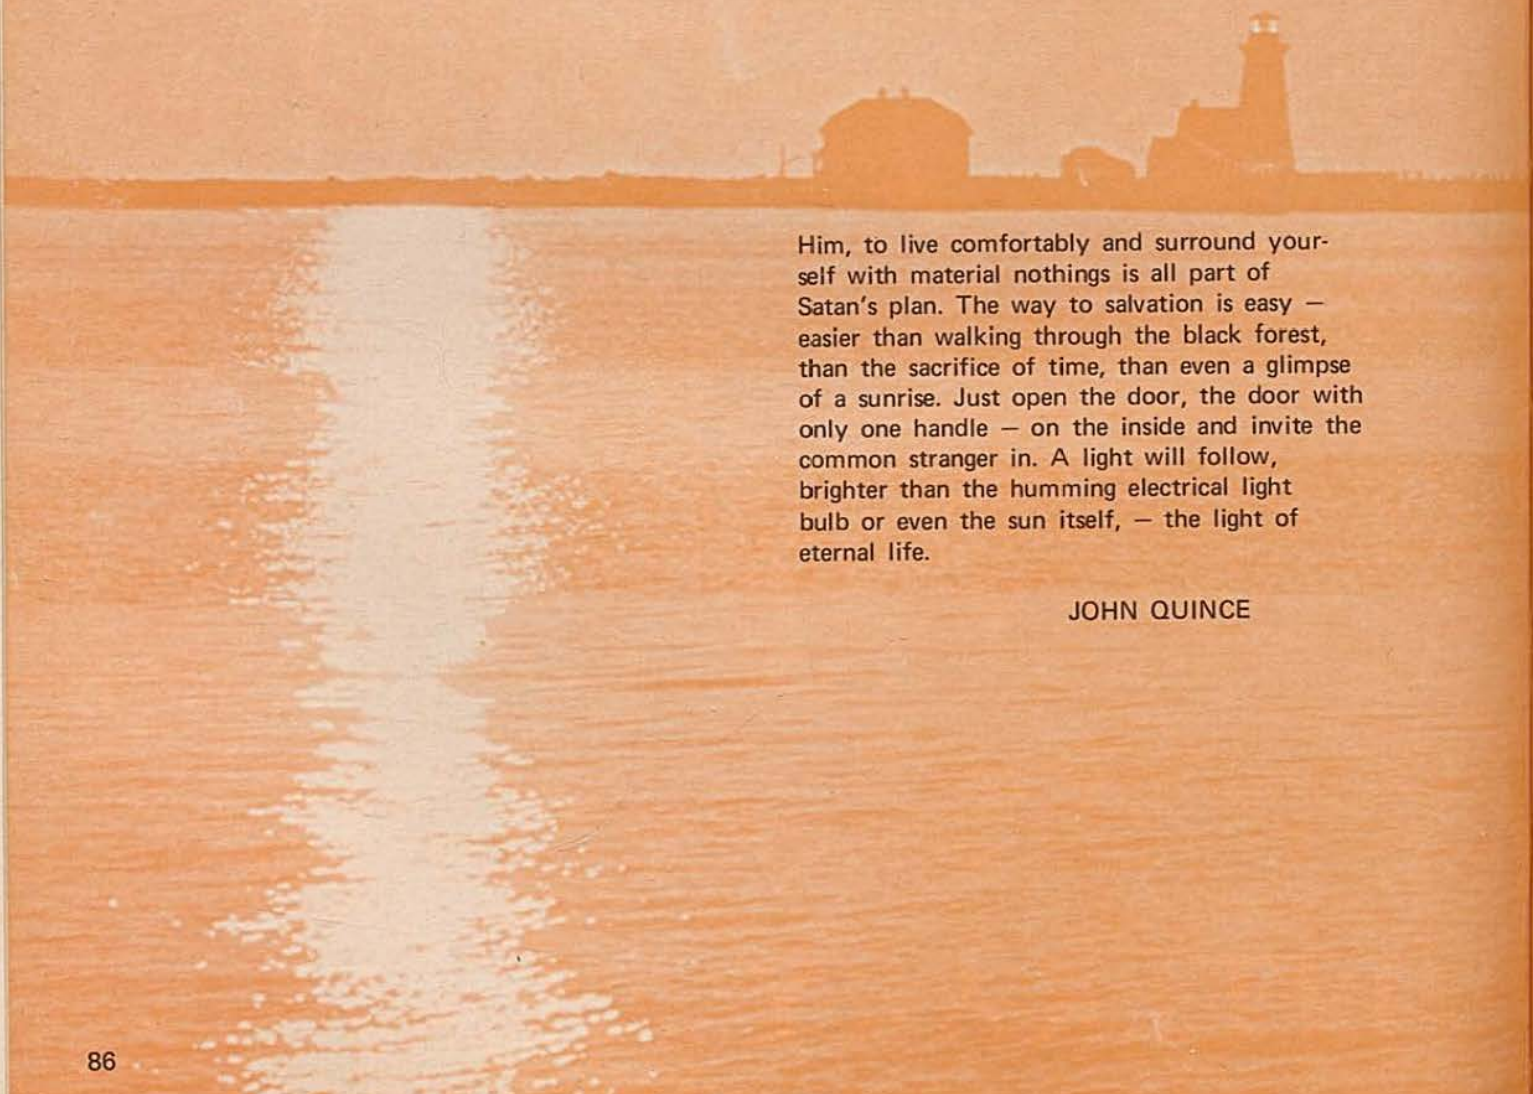
LITERARY

The Sunrise of Inception

Nature is slowly awakened by the insane laughing of the wild loon over a quiet lake. Long before most living creatures stir the sun will begin a new day. As the morning mist rises and mixes with the fresh scent of wet dew and pine, the music of birds and the movement of hungry squirrels defy the noise of urban cities. The majority of people will never sense Mother Nature, never really find themselves nor feel the penetrating warmth of the Sun, a heavenly sacrifice. For those the world will pass by causing them to miss the true meaning of life. Their automated society, impersonal atmosphere and electrical "aids" will not save them no matter how intelligent, wealthy or sophisticated they become. The future remains a question to all except a few. Those few see the sunrise, not only as a wonder but as another chance — a chance to be reborn. By being born again they can understand exactly where they stand, not in society — Satan's well disguised trap — but in His kingdom. To laughingly reject.



Him, to live comfortably and surround yourself with material nothings is all part of Satan's plan. The way to salvation is easy — easier than walking through the black forest, than the sacrifice of time, than even a glimpse of a sunrise. Just open the door, the door with only one handle — on the inside and invite the common stranger in. A light will follow, brighter than the humming electrical light bulb or even the sun itself, — the light of eternal life.

JOHN QUINCE

On the Surrealistic Sunset

You sit alone in the semidaylightness.
The sun is going down. You see the sky, so alive and bright, then the blue skin is torn and the fatal wound comes into view.
You see the blood, spurting and spreading and seeping and soaking. A drop falls upon your face; still feeling warm. You are afraid, for you know that last existing warmth will soon dissipate into the cold. Your fear grows into immense strength, enveloping you in a confusion of soul and mind. Your head aches and you cover your face, for you cannot watch that last scarlet dribble of life trickle out of sight.
All colour is gone.
Dead grayness covers all.
You sit in the Dali-emptiness; your ears hurting with the silence.
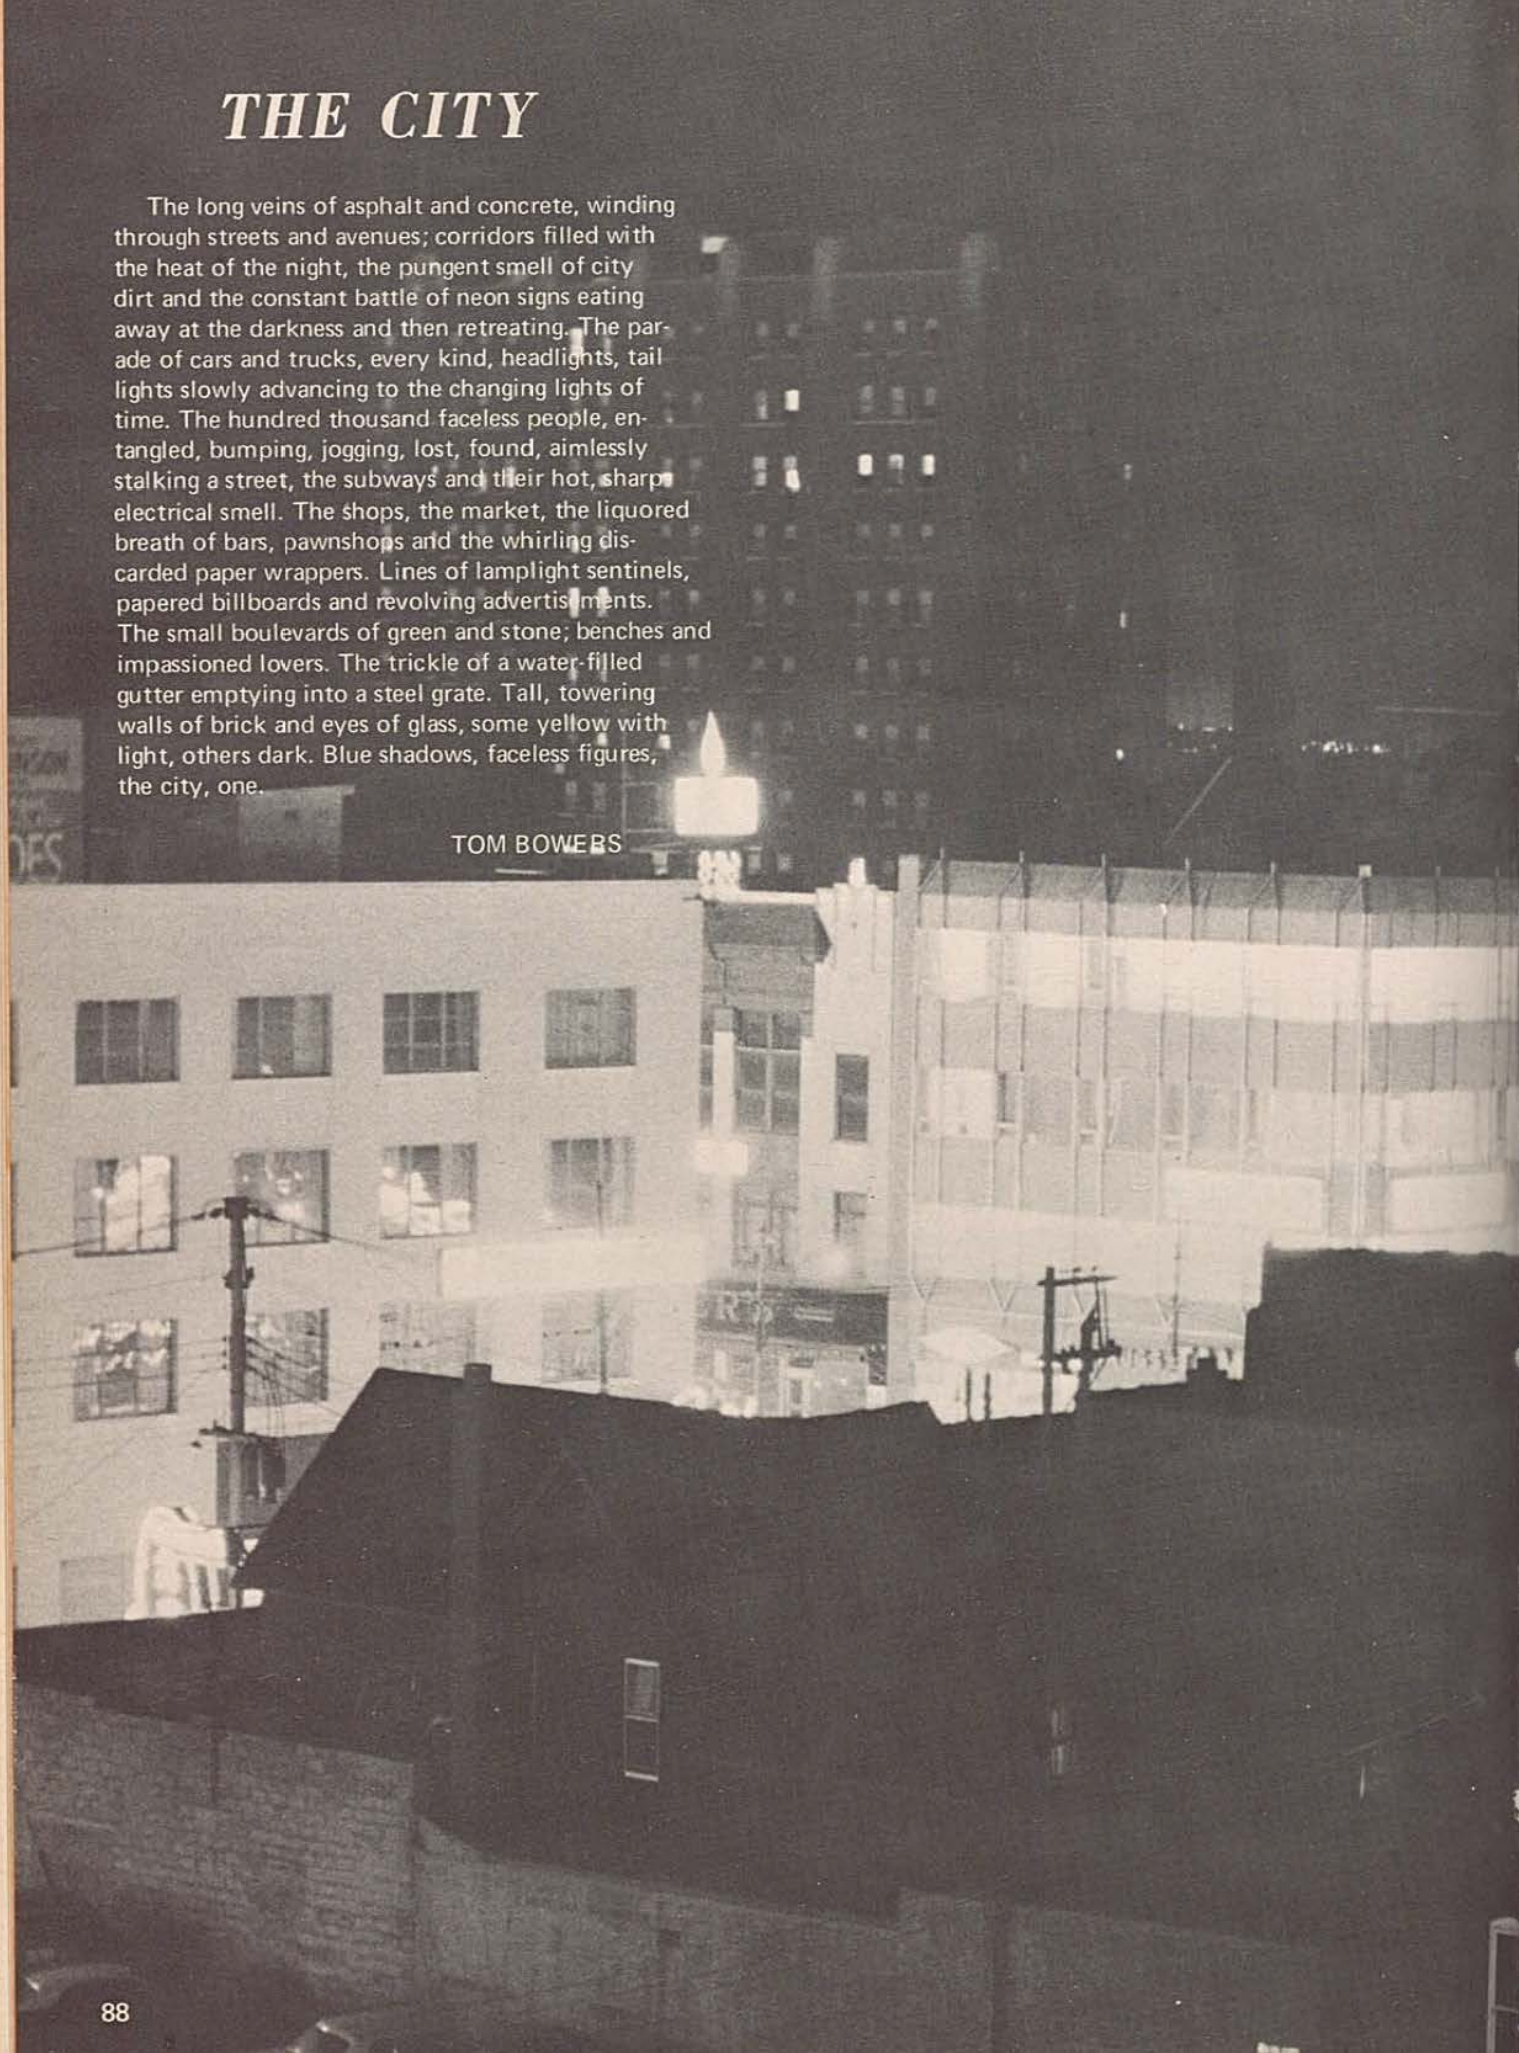
Now Carissime . . .
It is finished.

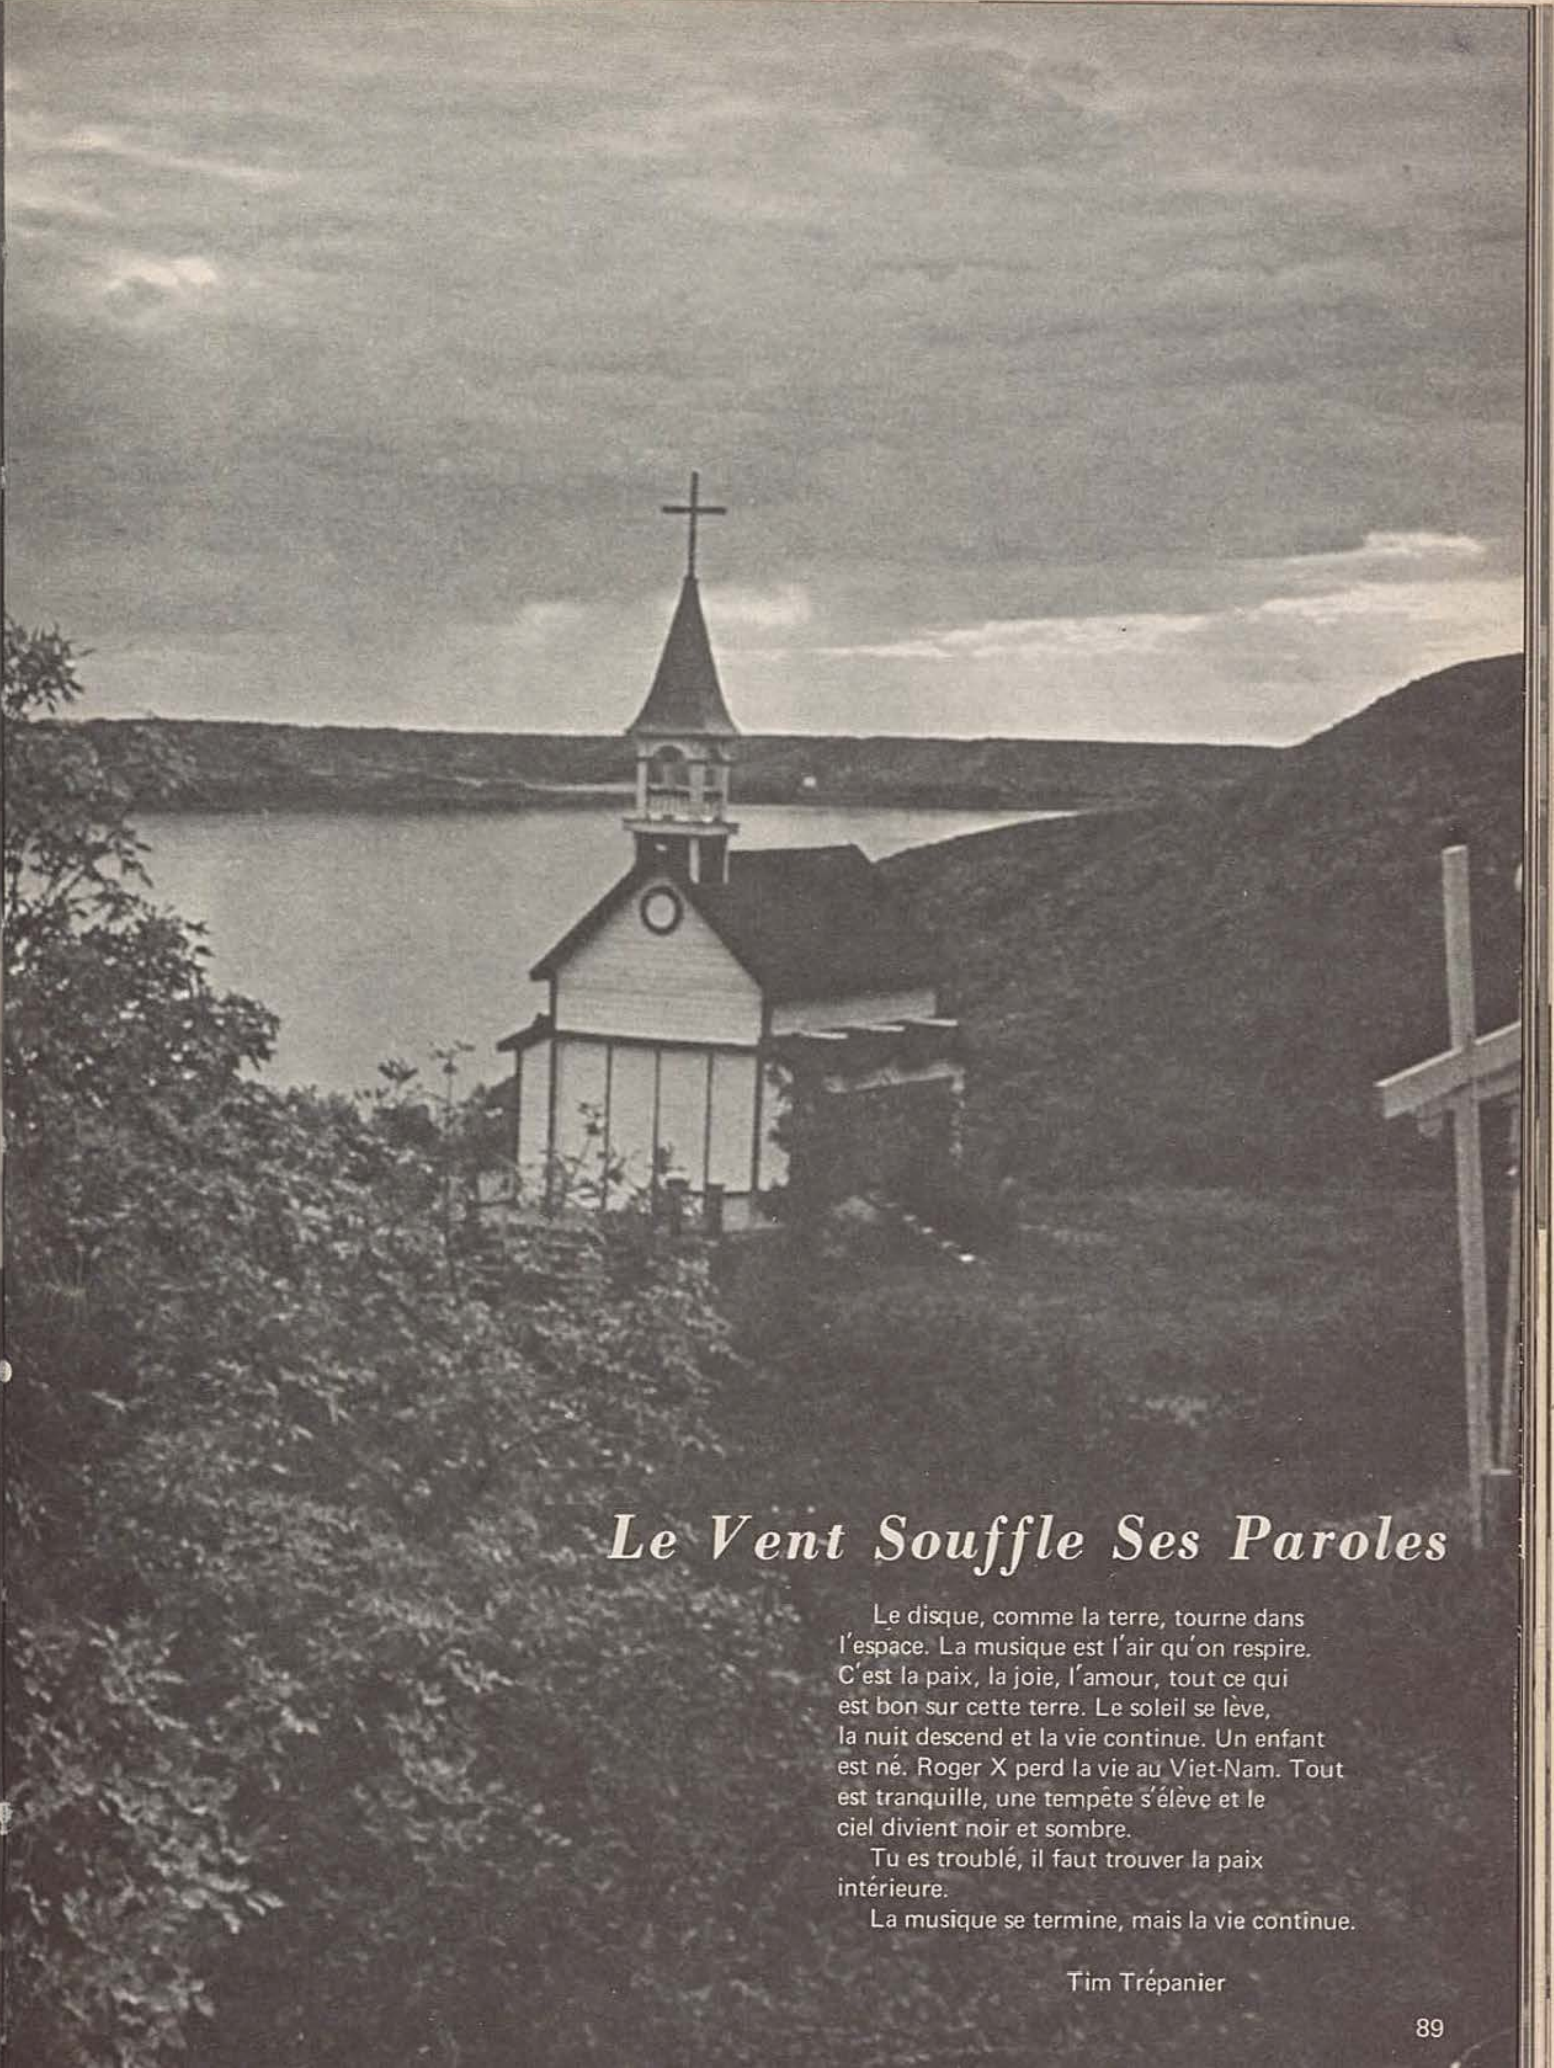
SARA KURTZ

THE CITY

The long veins of asphalt and concrete, winding through streets and avenues; corridors filled with the heat of the night, the pungent smell of city dirt and the constant battle of neon signs eating away at the darkness and then retreating. The parade of cars and trucks, every kind, headlights, tail lights slowly advancing to the changing lights of time. The hundred thousand faceless people, entangled, bumping, jogging, lost, found, aimlessly stalking a street, the subways and their hot, sharp electrical smell. The shops, the market, the liquored breath of bars, pawnshops and the whirling discarded paper wrappers. Lines of lamplight sentinels, papered billboards and revolving advertisements. The small boulevards of green and stone; benches and impassioned lovers. The trickle of a water-filled gutter emptying into a steel grate. Tall, towering walls of brick and eyes of glass, some yellow with light, others dark. Blue shadows, faceless figures, the city, one.

TOM BOWERS





Le Vent Souffle Ses Paroles

Le disque, comme la terre, tourne dans l'espace. La musique est l'air qu'on respire. C'est la paix, la joie, l'amour, tout ce qui est bon sur cette terre. Le soleil se lève, la nuit descend et la vie continue. Un enfant est né. Roger X perd la vie au Viet-Nam. Tout est tranquille, une tempête s'élève et le ciel divient noir et sombre.

Tu es troublé, il faut trouver la paix intérieure.

La musique se termine, mais la vie continue.

Tim Trépanier

"Everything that is mine, even to my life, I may give to the one I love, but the secret of my friend is not mine to give."

Sidney

"Poor is the friendless master of a world."

E. Young

"How seldom we weigh our neighbour in the same balance with ourselves."

Thomas A. Kempis

"When a friend asks there is no tomorrow."

Proverb

"A bit of fragrance always clings to the hand that gives the roses."

Proverb

A friend's frown is better than a fool's smile."

Proverb

My dear friends

We have just had our singing competition each cottage group had to sing two songs, it was held in the school hall, and we had to go up on the platform, which made we feel very nervous. All the girls pulled out the weeds in the garden and have decided to plant pumpkins and lettuce we have already grown beans and other things.

Fellow Students:

This year has seen the completion of a new school building and an exciting new atmosphere. The building itself is an insignificant skeleton but you the students have supplied this lifeless skeleton with its own unique character. Now, it isn't just a framework but it is an organization in which each and everyone of you plays a prominent part in its proper functioning.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to everyone who assisted and encouraged the activities of the Student Council. For reliable advice and counselling, I wish to thank Mr. Bezaire, Mr. Bryan and Mr. Roth. A very sincere thank you to Ernie, Karen, Dave and Anne for all their help and support during the past year.

In conclusion I wish to congratualte you the student body, for it was you who made this year a successful one. My pride in having held such an honoured position is not easily explained to anyone who hasn't experienced it. I only hope that I have served you well and have satisfied the demands of this very enthusiastic student body. Always,

Diane Fotheringham

OBJECTIVE: CAREER

The Regular Officer Training Plan is not for dreamers. It's for the clear-thinking, bright young man with a determination to embark on a meaningful and self-satisfying career.

The ROTP has one purpose: to make you work hard and train hard so that you come out a complete man as an officer in the Canadian Armed Forces.

You attend one of the Canadian Military Colleges where you may earn a Bachelor's degree in arts, sciences, or engineering. And you'll study for this degree in both of our official languages.

This program provides uniforms, board and a modest wage. Since vacancies at the Military Colleges are limited you may be sponsored at a Canadian university.

To us, this career plan is one of the most meaningful available to any young man growing up in Canada today. But it's not for dreamers. It's for the young man who has a strong eye to a responsible military career.

For further information write or visit Canadian Forces Recruiting Centre, 185 Ouellette Ave., Windsor, Ontario.
